Population and Public Health: A New Frontier in Regional Planning

The program for the 2015 Fall Commission Meeting will be focused on SWRPC's participation in several health planning initiatives. Recent efforts include assistance in developing a comprehensive health improvement plan, promoting active transportation activities, and participating in a regional behavioral health services inventory. Planning Commission staff will be joined by community partners who are coordinating these efforts to provide an overview of these projects, discuss the specific contributions that a regional planning commission can offer, and describe how such activities can be integrated into on-going efforts to address quality of life in our communities. A "close-up" view of these projects will provide community officials and others with a good sense of some of the important work that's currently underway and how regional planners are playing an important role.
